

I don't think the FCC should implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's telephone privacy law protection. This law has greatly improved the number of "annoying" calls that we used to receive at home. If the law is changed to let anybody that claims you are an "existing customer" to phone individuals we'll probably receive several "sales/annoying" calls like we did before we signed up for the Indiana Telephone Privacy do not call list.